

The Drama.

(Special Correspondence.)

San Francisco, Aug. 9.—One era of a remarkably active theatrical season here will come to a close next Saturday night, when Henry Miller ends his engagement at the Columbia theatre, and the Crawley company, with Blanche Bates, leaves the California. Miss Bates is a great favorite here on the coast, and her engagement has been a succession of personal triumphs. During the last week of her stay, she will be seen in "London Assurance" and "As You Like It," and on Wednesday afternoon, a big testimonial will be given for her. The Miller engagement has also been a great success, which speaks well for the improvement in the tastes of audience, as well as an increased willingness to pay higher prices. San Francisco people grew so accustomed to the 50-cent scale for the very best attractions, that they grew to regard anything higher as an intrusion. Now, however, there is promise of a change for the better, by which Salt Lake is sure to benefit. Cheap prices in San Francisco are what have so seriously hurt western attractions. People generally get only just what they pay for in this world. There is no such thing as a bargain, excepting where the word is a synonym for "shabby." The only exception to this rule that I can think of at present is the opera at the Tivoli.

Here one truly receives a remarkable 50 cents' worth. Last night I heard the most excellent performance of "Il Trovatore."

Miss Lichter was the Leonora, and Miss Linck the Azucena. The tenor, Signor Avedano, and the baritone, Signor Salassa, are both singers of unusual worth. Signor Avedano has an unpleasant way of forcing the ends of his high notes, which is perhaps a play to a certain peculiarity of the San Francisco audience, of which I shall speak later. On the whole, the principals did their work well, especially Miss Linck, who is a powerful actress, and was, in make-up and dramatic intensity, a superb Sympy.

She is by all odds the best actress in the company, as Miss Linck is one of the old, stiff variety of singers. Next to Miss Linck in this respect, comes Signor Salassa, who combines a beautiful voice with passionate warmth of utterance. Signor Avedano, on the other hand, is the typical wooden tenor, in action, but in voice he is one of the favorites of the company. A curious office, which renders dangerously near the ridiculous, is gained in these productions by mixing two languages. Miss Lichter, Miss Linck and the second baritone sing in English, and the remainder of the company in Italian. Therefore, the soprano and tenor answer each other in the love scenes in two different languages. And now this was not as ridiculous as in the case of the gypsy and her supposed son. She called him "my son," and he answered "madre," giving me the impression that they did not understand each other. It puts the principals out of touch with each other, and it is a pity that an otherwise excellent performance should be so seriously marred. Next week, the company will give "Fidelio" and "The Hugenots." The Tivoli is at present the rendezvous of all music lovers, and the utmost enthusiasm prevails during the performances. Approval is expressed by shouts of "Bravo!" as well as applause, and it is good to hear such demonstration of the habitual reserve of our audiences at home.

A peculiarity of the San Francisco audience is that it is fairly carried off its feet by a high note. The higher the note, the greater the enthusiasm, and a very high note forced to a fortissimo at the end, held several minutes, causes positive excitement. This absence lutely never fails. Any artistically rendered scene will call forth comparatively mild approval, but if ended on a flat or a low note, the audience will be disappointed. If a high note occurs in the middle of a scene, one will hear murmurs all about, as though everyone were whispering to his neighbor, "That is good!" Every time Signor Avedano forced a high note last night, the house simply stormed. Demonstration is pleasant to an artist, but if he is careful, Signor Avedano will end his career in continuous performance, to pay for his present popularity.

Speaking of vaudeville reminds me of the Orpheum, the big vaudeville theatre. It is the biggest play-house in town, and is packed every night. It has its regular patrons, and people visiting the city prefer the entertainment there to grand opera or heavy drama. The air is so thick with cigar smoke that one can scarcely see the performance. Seating, however, is not necessary to one's enjoyment, and one can always hear the coon impersonations and brass band primadonnas. The men have decidedly the best of a performance of this kind, for they can enjoy their cigars, while the women must suffer this part as well as the rest of it at times. However, the performance at the Orpheum this week, which may be taken as a fair sample, is a very good one for the price, and contains some excellent features. The acrobatic barrel jumpers carry off the palm. Coon songs are so overdone nowadays that they all sound alike, and pass without particular notice. This show contained a "real coon," who did not try to be anything but what he was, and was therefore a success. He was "assisted" in his act by a rag-time pianist who gave several examples of this specialty, including "Narcissus" in rag-time, which was quite a novelty.

Every audience at the theatres contains a liberal percentage of soldier boys. The California coast is preparing a royal reception for their own regiment, which is expected shortly. A benefit for the entertainment fund is to be given at the Orpheum in which the leading professional talent here will take part. The auction sale of seats and boxes is to take place today and will be interesting in itself. Among those who will assist the auctioneer are Blanche Bates, Mrs. Clay Clement, Louise Thorndyke-Boucault, Margaret Anzlin, Alice Nelson, Edna Well-lace-Hopper, Margaret Dale, Edith Mason, Anna Lichter, Mary Linck and Hope Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Clement will open their season shortly at the Columbia theatre. They will be seen in Salt Lake next month.

Big Sale of Utah Lambs. (Denver Republican.)

Sheep feeders of Colorado and Nebraska are beginning to look for animals for fall and winter feeding. A deal was closed at the Union Stock Yards yesterday by John James of Nebraska for the delivery of 6,000 Utah lambs at this point before Oct. 15 by White of Utah. It is said that Nebraska farmers will feed more sheep and lambs this year than ever before, on account of the big crops of corn and other grains that produce the high-priced mutton of Chicago and other eastern markets.

INVITATION TO RETURNED VOLUNTEERS

In compliance with the general invitation extended by his excellency, Governor Heber M. Wells, to the people of the state to unite in a grand demonstration and reception on the occasion of the return of the Utah battalion of light artillery from the Philippine islands, and in a fitting manner express the love and high esteem in which Utah holds her volunteers for their loyalty in responding so promptly to the call for men to uphold the honor and dignity of our flag and avenge the dastardly destruction of the Maine and her gallant men.
As a feature of the celebration to take place upon this occasion, it is proposed to invite all returned volunteers now within the state, who enlisted in any of the Utah organizations, to participate in the parade, and to be present at the exercises to receive the medals of honor to be presented by the state.
The original muster rolls to the governor's office give the addresses of these volunteers previous to their enlistment, but in the lapse of so eventful a year very many of them have changed their residences. The committee desires to ascertain all their present addresses, and to this end requests all returned volunteers now within the state to forward their present addresses to their old commanding officers, as follows:
First Troop, Utah Cavalry, to Captain Joseph E. Caine, Salt Lake City.
Troop L, Second United States Volunteer Cavalry, to Lieutenant Colonel John C. Cannon, Salt Lake City.
Battery C, Utah Volunteer Artillery, to Lieutenant John T. D. Murphy, Ogden.
Returned Batterymen of Batteries A and B, to Sergeant D. H. Wells, Salt Lake City.
Third United States Volunteer Engineers, Company K, to C. S. Burton, Adjutant General, Salt Lake City.
The committee further desires to know, at as early a date as it is possible, the name and number that will be in ranks of all organizations—especially uniformed—throughout the state, that expect to be present in Salt Lake City on that occasion, that provision may be made for their proper assignment in the parade.
It is also earnestly desired to know the name and strength of every band that will be here to participate in the exercises on that day, that they may have proper assignment in the line.
Address all communications, except those specified above, to General W. H. Penrose, Grand Marshal, Room 411, Auerbach Block, Salt Lake City, or call up 'phone 600.
All associations and bands desiring to participate in the parade, to welcome our returning volunteers, are requested to report to the grand marshal at the earliest moment. Also all men from Utah who enlisted in the regulars or other state volunteer units. Room 411, Auerbach building. GEN. WM. H. H. PENROSE, U. S. A., Grand Marshal.

"Love's Conflict," duet by Mr. Young, and Mr. Hedger, Sunday afternoon, at Lagoon, 2:30 and 6, in the bower.

HASTINGS SUICIDE MYSTERY

NOTHING LEARNED CONCERNING MRS. LEE'S IDENTITY.

Believed That Lee Was Not Her True Name—Morgue Visited By a Mysterious Stranger.

A special dispatch to the Omaha Bee from Hastings, Neb., says:

There is just as much mystery as ever surrounding the death of the young woman who died in the Lindell hotel of this city last night from a heavy dose of morphine. She had registered as "Mrs. W. L. Lee of Salt Lake City," but as telegrams have been sent to Salt Lake and various other places, and no identification has been made, it is generally believed that "Lee" is not her true name.

At the coroner's inquest, held today, it was learned that the woman arrived in Hastings Tuesday night on Burlington flyer No. 3, and that she was accompanied by a man, who escorted her to a back. The couple were driven to the Bostwick hotel, where both registered. The man registered as "George P. Crowley of Fort Madison, Ia." He remained at the Bostwick over night, but left on the Kearney freight in the morning. The woman failed to get a room, so she went to the Lindell, where she left word to call her in time to go to Cowley, where she claimed her father lived. It seems that she was not at the hotel long before she penned the following letter:

Letter to Her Father.

Wednesday—Dear Papa: I am so glad I am coming home, as I know you always loved me. My life has been so full of bitter disappointments since we parted. I am so glad to get home. Your loving daughter, MRS. W. L. LEE.

P. S.—Walter is in Seattle.

As the letter was not addressed no clue was given to the father's residence.

When her value was examined it was found to contain a pocketbook with $8 in it, a four-ounce bottle labeled "Alcohol, Hayden Brothers, Omaha," and two small articles. Her shirt waist had been marked, but the name was removed.

At 1:15 this afternoon a stranger called at the morgue to view the remains. He gave his name as H. Spencer of Omaha. He was escorted to where the body was lying on a cooling board, and as soon as he caught sight of the face he gave a slight start and his eyes became moist. For several minutes he looked upon the face of the dead woman. Tears gathered and he swallowed as if trying to remove a lump that had gathered in his throat. When asked if he recognized the woman he refused to answer, but immediately made his way to the street.

Omaha Man Disappears.

It is said that he made the statement that he was going in the country and would return at 5 o'clock, but at a late hour has failed to materialize.

A hotel porter claims to have carried a grip to the Burlington depot shortly after 2 o'clock for a man who perfectly answers the description of the man who gave his name as H. Spencer of Omaha.

Whoever the stranger was that viewed the remains in the morgue, he certainly recognized the corpse.

The coroner's inquest has been going on all day, and is expected to close at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, when it is hoped sufficient evidence will be in to identify the remains. A good description of the woman is as follows: She was a brunette of medium height, strong physique, a nose little larger than the ordinary, high forehead and of pleasant appearance. She wore a
